

Emily Feenstra

Director, International Program and Network
Maven Clinic
Washington, D.C.

Emily Feenstra is the director of Maven Clinic’s International Program and Network, where she focuses on Maven’s services for multinational organizations and members outside of the U.S. Emily started her career in management consulting at McKinsey & Company and then spent five years in impact investing—investing in early-stage education technology companies in emerging markets. She shifted into an operating role in the health tech space more than five years ago, first working at a pre-seed stage mental health company focused on serving people of color before joining Maven. Emily earned a bachelor of science degree from Carnegie Mellon University in international relations and politics as well as policy and management.
